Participants in the second annual Walk, Roll, Run 2K Marathon start their trek around Lake Mayer on Saturday.

Everyone wins

While it might not sound like a far distance for most athletes, for many of the 20 amputees who participated in Savannah's second annual Amputee Walk, Roll, Run 2K Marathon on some days simply walking can be a challenge. And while Saturday's race at Lake Mayer wasn't competitive it was for a good cause: Proceeds are going toward PIPO Missions Inc./Limbs and Braces to Mexico Mission. In addition to raising money for amputees in a foreign land, the event was also a way to showcase the physical abilities of the athletes and help able-bodied people to try on a special prosthesis that lets them experience what is a reality for nearly 2,000 people in Savannah.
